Learner Outcome

W-4.3 Describe physical, emotional and social changes that occur during puberty; e.g., menstruation, secondary sexual characteristics, changing identity and moods

How to Use

This lesson plan contains several activities to achieve the learner outcome above. You may choose to do some or all of the activities, based on the needs of your students and the time available. Some of the activities build on the ones that come before them, however all can be used alone.

For a quick lesson, combine activities A, D and G.

If you choose not to do all the activities, use your professional judgement to assess which outcomes you have covered and which may need additional activities.

Classroom Activities & Timing

A. Ground Rules (5-10 minutes)
B. Talking about Bodies (15-20 minutes)
C. Great and Difficult Changes (10-15 minutes)
D. They Tell Me I’m Going Through Puberty (20-25 minutes)
E. Dear Chen Letter Writing (15-25 minutes)
F. Ask an Adult Homework
G. Question Box (5-10 minutes)

Background Information for Teachers

As children enter puberty, they can experience feelings ranging from excitement to dread. Teachers can help students deal with these feelings by helping them to identify the changes that will occur and the tools they have to manage these changes. You can also encourage students to seek an adult with whom they can communicate about sexual health. Honest, open communication between parents (or other important adults) and children through childhood and the teen years can help lay the foundation for people to mature into sexually healthy adults.

Part of becoming a healthy adolescent includes understanding both the changes they are going through individually, and the changes that others may be experiencing. Learning to accept and appreciate the changes that occur is part of growing up. These lessons help students establish a comfort level with talking about human sexuality, examine puberty changes and discover those that are unique to people with certain body parts and those that are common to everyone.

Inclusive Language

Language is complex, evolving and powerful. In these lessons, inclusive language is used to be inclusive of all students, including those with diverse gender identities, gender expressions and sexual orientations. This includes the use of ‘they’ as a singular gender-neutral pronoun.

A person’s sex can be male, female or intersex (not clearly defined as either male or female). Sex is independent of gender identity. Gender identity is a person’s internal sense of identity as female, male, both or neither, regardless of their sex assigned at birth.

For many people, their gender matches the sex they were assigned at birth (cisgender). For others, their gender identity does not match the sex they were assigned at birth. They may use terms like transgender, trans, non-binary, gender fluid, gender queer, agender or others, to describe their gender identity. The umbrella term ‘trans’ is primarily used here, to describe people whose gender identity and sex assigned at birth differ. While this umbrella term does not fit everyone, the intention is to be inclusive as possible.

A. Ground Rules

Ensure ground rules are established before beginning this lesson. For classes that have already established ground rules, quickly reviewing them can help ensure a successful lesson.

B. Talking About Bodies

Students are often embarrassed to talk about puberty and genitals. Being able to talk about all body parts, with the scientific names, may be a new experience for them. To introduce what may be significant new vocabulary and ease them in to talking about these topics, start with this exercise.

1. Give each student the Talking About Bodies handout.

2. Give them a few minutes to work on their own to complete as much as they can.

3. Have students partner up to share what they have come up with, and to try and complete the entire exercise.

4. Share the answers: lip, ear, eye, gum, jaw, leg, arm, rib, toe, hip.

5. Ask the group to name any body parts they can think of that are different on boys and girls. You may need to prompt them by talking about ‘private’ body parts, or parts that are ‘covered by bathing suits’; teach them the word genitals at this time. They may only know slang words for their genitals. If a student uses a slang word, accept their contribution and share with the class the scientific name for the part. Ensure these words are listed:
   - penis
   - scrotum
   - testicles
   - vulva
   - breasts

If gender identity or expression are new concepts for your students, use the ‘Every Body’ Tool to explain the differences between sex, gender identity and gender expression. See the Background Information section for more on inclusive language.
Grade 4 Puberty Changes

6. Explain that knowing these words will help when they are talking about some of the changes of puberty that you will be talking about in later activities.

7. You may need to explain the difference between vagina and vulva, as the two terms are often used interchangeably or incorrectly. The vagina is inside the body, and the vulva is the part outside of the body (what touches underwear or a bathing suit).

C. Great and Difficult Changes

This activity allows students to consider both the positive and difficult changes that accompany puberty and begin to identify their support systems for coping with the changes.

1. Write these titles on separate pages of newsprint, and post them on the wall:
   - The Great Things About Growing Up
   - The Difficult Things About Growing Up

2. As a class, come up with an example or two for each heading. An example of a difficult change could be moodiness. A great change could be more independence.

3. Discuss some changes that may fit in both categories. For example, more responsibility can be seen as both great (“I get to baby-sit!”) or difficult (“I have to baby-sit.”).

4. Have students walk around the room writing their ideas under each title.

5. Debrief the activity by discussing:

   Why do we develop?
   - Puberty happens to everyone. Changing from a child to an adult is called puberty.

   Why are some changes difficult? Great?
   - People react to change differently. Some changes may be listed as being both great and difficult. Feelings about change are personal. A difficult change (as identified by the students) does not have to be a problem. There are different ways to cope with change.

   What can we do to make change easier?
   - Focus on our strengths (e.g., communication, standing up for ourselves and independence) that will help us with puberty.
Grade 4 Puberty Changes

- Identify support systems (i.e., family, school and community members) who can provide help/support.

Are there any changes listed on the two lists that probably won’t happen to people when they are developing?
- Identify any changes listed that are incorrect or unlikely and explain why the change is not likely.
- For example, students may have listed a change such as “girls are more mature than boys”. This is a myth. Some girls may start puberty earlier than some boys, however they are not necessarily more mature.

D. They Tell Me I’m Going Through Puberty

This activity helps students see that the majority of changes that happen in puberty are common to all, and only are few are specific to people with certain body parts. For a version of the Puberty Changes cards with pictures and words, see the Differing Abilities lesson on Puberty.

1. Read They Tell Me I’m Going Through Puberty to the students. You can also give the students the handout to follow along as you read, or have volunteers take turns reading parts of the story.

2. When you are done, ask students “Can you tell Chen’s age or gender from this story?” Have students share their answers with a nearby classmate and discuss their reasons.

3. Post these titles on the wall:
   - Physical Changes
   - Emotional and Social Changes

4. Distribute the Puberty Changes cards to each student, until all the cards are distributed. Explain that each card contains a change that someone MIGHT experience during puberty. Each person may or may not experience any of the changes listed on the cards.

5. Have students place each card under the title which best fits the puberty change described.

6. As a class, review the card placements, and make the necessary changes. Explain any changes that students don’t understand. You may wish to give a fuller explanation of some of the physical changes that only happen to females/people with uteruses (menstruation, ovulation, vaginal discharge, hips get wider) vs. changes that only happen to males/people with testicles (erections, ejaculation, shoulders get wider, sperm production, testicles get bigger).

* Most people experience some breast changes during puberty because of the production of sex hormones. Many of these changes are temporary such as hard breast buds and tenderness. For females/people with a uterus, breast growth is typically permanent. For males/those with testicles, it is typically temporary.
7. Re-read The Tell Me I'm Going Through Puberty.

8. Ask students if their ideas about Chen’s age or gender have changed.

9. Follow up with a discussion emphasizing that:
   - no change that is happening to Chen would indicate one sex or gender over another
   - the changes Chen is experiencing are normal and could happen to anyone
   - changes like those Chen is experiencing happen to different people at different times, and can begin as early as age 8 and continue until 18
   - changing from a child to an adult is called puberty

E. Dear Chen Letter Writing

This activity requires completion of Activity D first.

1. Distribute the handout Dear Chen.

2. Have students write a letter to Chen explaining what will happen to people during puberty.

3. Collect the letters for evaluation. Ensure that students address:
   - physical changes (changes to the body)
   - emotional/social changes (thoughts and feelings)
   - support people (e.g. family, community members)

4. Debrief the activity by asking students:
   - What was the hardest part of the letter to write?
   - If you had a letter like this addressed to you, what would you want it to teach you?

F. Ask an Adult Homework

Students begin to build a support network to help them manage change and thrive in puberty.

1. Distribute the Ask an Adult handout for students to complete as a homework assignment.

2. Explain that students can complete this interview with any adult they trust, including a parent, grandparent, foster parent, older sibling, aunt, uncle, coach, or family friend.

3. Explain that this is not a graded assignment and there are no right or wrong answers.

4. Dedicate time to debrief this activity during the next lesson.

Keep in mind that not all students have equal opportunities for open discussion with family or other adults in their life.

Due to the sensitive nature of human sexuality topics, it is recommended that homework is reviewed or discussed but not graded.

G. Question Box

Answer any questions from the question box in the previous lesson. Have students submit any new questions and address them next class.

Addressing the questions at the next class allows you time to review the questions and prepare responses.

Self-Reflection

During the lesson, were:

- ground rules being followed?
- good practices established regarding group work and discussion?

What will you change for future classes with this group?

What will you change for future use of this lesson?

Student Assessment

During the lesson, did students:

Knowledge:

- identify various changes that occur during puberty?
- describe ways to cope with change?
- identify support systems that can help during puberty?
Skills:
- work together to brainstorm examples of puberty change?
- exhibit appropriate listening and speaking skills during class discussion?

Attitudes:
- acknowledge that changes will happen during puberty?
- accept that change is part of puberty?
- demonstrate comfort discussing elements of sexuality?
Can you name 10 parts of the body spelled with only three letters? Try to avoid slang. See if you can find 5 that are above the neck and 5 that are below.

Hi, I’m Chen and I’d like to tell you about what’s happening to me. It seems that every day brings a new change. It’s almost like I’m getting a new body! They tell me I’m going through puberty.

One thing that’s happening is this new hair that’s growing in places it’s never been before. Like under my arms. I know this is normal and all, but it still takes getting used to.

I don’t mind some of the changes I’m seeing. In fact, some things I even like. I’m taller than I was last year. I know I’m smarter just because I’m able to think and write about what I’m going through now.

But then, there are some changes that aren’t so good. Like B.O. (body odour). The first time I noticed it, I thought I had some kind of disease or something. Now I realize it’s not too bad if I wash and use deodorant.

The worst part so far is acne. I remember I was getting ready to go to a birthday party, washing up and stuff, when I looked in the mirror and saw this big zit staring back at me. I held hot washcloths on it for a long time. It went down, but not the whole way. I went to the party anyway. I noticed that many other kids had the same or worse luck with their zits. I wonder how common this is.

There’s one thing I get a little embarrassed about. It’s even hard for me to say this. When I was at the party the other night, I was with someone I like (and I’m not mentioning any names). I got this new feeling. It was strange but kind of nice. They tell me it’s normal. Is it?

They tell me I’m going through puberty. That means I have to go to school with my zits and my B.O. But, I’m taller and smarter. I think I’ll survive.

Can you tell Chen’s age or gender from this story?

Dear Chen,

Guess what? You are about to enter puberty! Congratulations. This means that...

To help you out, I am writing you a letter explaining some of the changes that will happen to people as they grow up. You should know about what happens to people of all genders because...

There are lots of physical changes (changes to the body) that will happen. Here is a list of some changes you can expect to see happening to you and your friends:

When we grow up, our thoughts, feelings and relationships might change too! It’s normal to experience:
It seems like a lot for anyone to go through, doesn’t it? Puberty means a lot of change. Sometimes it’s great. Sometimes it’s difficult. The best thing is that we don’t need to go through puberty alone. We can get help from lots of people. Here are some people you can go to for help:

From,
Ask an Adult

Puberty can be a challenge. It helps to have a parent or an adult you trust to talk to about your questions or concerns. All adults have gone through the changes of growing up. Having your parent or a supportive adult share their experience of growing up can help you during your own experience of puberty.

1. Take this handout home. Share it with a parent, guardian or other adult you trust and ask that person if you can complete it together.

2. Plan a time with the adult for the interview. Give the adult this handout so that they can think about the answers before the interview.

3. Interview the adult using the questions provided.

Questions

What was the first sign you noticed that you had started puberty? How old were you?

What was difficult about puberty?

How did you handle the difficult parts of puberty?

What was the best thing about puberty?
